Translation of letter from Fiji.

The Letter of Jonathan to Mr. Dunsford.

"My F lend.—I write to you to-day to tell you about myr illness. I loveyou very much to-day because of the medicine you gave to me. Three months I was very ill, truly, because of my leg I could not plant yams, I could not go fishing. I could not eat or sleep; but now I am quite well again. It is truly a wonderful medicine. I beg you, Mr. Dunsford, give me one more bottle, as the month of boils is near.

"Preparation Day (Saturday), Bua, Vanual Levu.

"Explanation of above Letter.

"In Fiji, at certain times of the year, both the European residents and the natives themselves break out in boils, which, if not immediately seen to, not infrequently develop into terrible running sores. At these times I can conscienc tiously assert that I know of no better medicine than 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' which I have used with unfailing success both among my white and black neighbours. The enclosed letter from 'Jonathan,' a Christianised Fijidn speaks for itself. For three months he had bea, almost a cripple, and yet one of our large bottles co mpletely set him t up. In ordinary cases even a less quananity will effect a cure.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

"T. EDGCUMBE DUNSFORD.

"21 June, 1892."

SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF INDIA.

BOMBAY OFFICE:—29, Esplanade Road.

PUBLIC OPINION

On the Remarkable Progress made by the Company:—

THE LIFE INSURANCE account of the SUN of India shows an Increase in the Life Insurance Funds, which at the beginning of the year were £19,275, and are £39,503 at the end of the year. . . . . The Company has fully justified its existence and has excellent prospects in the future.—The Review.

As we have said, the report cannot but be considered as of a very satisfactory nature. An increase in the Yearly Premiums of nearly 100 per cent. and a Reduction in Expenditure . . is something of which the Directors may justifiably be proud, especially having regard to the fact that such a thing has been found possible after less than three years of existence. Many an older company would like to go and do likewise.—The Colonies and India.

KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM
KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR

LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL

THE PUREST. THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST DIGESTIBLE. THE MOST EFFICACIOUS.

Incontestably proved by Thirty Years' Medical Experience to be The only Cod Liver Oil which produces the full curative effects in CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN, RICKETS, AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB, Bart., M.D.,
Physician to the Westminster Hospital.

"The value of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many Affections of the Throat and Larynx, especially in Consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails."

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
Physician to the Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.

"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. It was especially noted, in a large number of cases in which the patients protested they had never been able to retain or digest other Cod Liver Oil, that DR. DE JONGH'S OIL was not only tolerated, but taken readily, and with marked benefit."

JOSEPH J. POPE, Esq., M.R.C.S.,
Late Staff Surgeon, Army, Professor of Hygiene, Birkbeck Institution, London.

"I found during my Indian experience that the worth and character of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL remained unchanged by tropical heat or foreign climate, and it was, from its uniformity of character, particularly adapted for long-continued administration. The value of hydro-carbons in all debilitated states of the system is now becoming thoroughly recognized; and it is, without doubt, from the animal oils and fats, far superior to their vegetable substitutes, that we may hope to derive the surest benefit. The Oil of DR. DE JONGH places in everyone's reach a reliable and valuable remedy, one that cannot be too widely recognized."

DR. R. O. CROFT,
Author of "Handbook for the Nursery."

"DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL is almost a specific in many of the Diseases peculiar to Infancy and Childhood, and I have seen marked benefit produced by its use. Patients prefer it to the Pale Oils, and are able to retain it more comfortably."

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL is supplied ONLY in IMPERIAL Half-Pints, Pints and Quarts, sealed with BETTS'S Patent Capsule impressed on the top with DR. DE JONGH'S Stamp, and on the side with his Signature, and the Signature of ANSAR, HARFORD & Co.; and bearing under the wrapper a Label with the same Stamp and Signature

PERFECT PEBBLE SPECTACLES.

LAWRENCE & MAYO,

OPHTHALMIC OPTICIANS,

(OPTICIANS TO THE PRINCIPAL OPHTHALMIC SURGEONS IN INDIA)

BY

SPECIAL APPOINTMENT

H. E. the VICEROY & GOVERNOR-GENL. of INDIA; GENERAL LORD ROBERTS; H. E. LORD WENLOCK, Governor of Madras.

THE term Optician has long been so recklessly misapplied that the meaning of it has become obscure; probably nine persons out of ten would define it as a spectacle-seller. In Europe the duty of the Optician is limited more strictly than it is in India, to merely giving mechanical effect to the Oculist's definitions, but out here it is essential that he should possess at least sufficient technical knowledge to enable him to define and correct the ordinary forms of ametropia himself. To keep an assortment of Spectacles, more or less tastefully arranged, for the customer to try on and select from, like a pair of boots, is obviously unscientific; most people prefer to be measured even for boots, and how much more delicate a matter is the Eye.

At our Reception Rooms in the three Presidency towns perfect arrangements have been made for Testing the Sight, and we endeavour to visit the chief mofussil stations periodically for the same purpose. In the intervals the best advice we can offer to persons at a distance is to get a proper definition from a qualified medical man in case of need rather than select glass themselves haphazard. We can then prepare Spectacles that will correct any defects arising out of removable conditions of the refraction.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 22.

THE Indian Council made extra allotments yesterday of 2 lakhs of Bills on Bombay and 4½ lakhs on Calcutta at 1 1-32d. which is the same as the highest price fetched by extra Transfers on Wednesday. Consols were down again 1/8 per cent., to 101; but Indian Sterling Loan was unchanged at 108¾. Four per cent. Rupee Securities were 3-8 per cent. higher, at £56¼. An advance of 9-16d. took place in the price of Bar Silver, at 28 15-16d. per oz., and in New York, the metal was 1/8 cent dearer, at 63 1/8 cents per oz.,; with demand Exchange on London unaltered, at 4·88¾. The Exchange Banks' buying rate in London at 30 days' sight remained at 1s. 0 13-16d. The weekly shipments of Specie to India consisted of £120,000 in Silver, and £10,000 in Gold to this port. French Rentes in Paris were ¼ per cent. higher, at 100f ex-coupon; Paris Exchange on London was unaltered at fcs. 25·15.

The Bank of England weekly Returns issued yesterday showed no change in the position of the Bank's Reserve, which remained at 71 per cent. of the Liabilities. The Bank rate sale was still 2 per cent.; and the market rates of discount were ¾ per cent. on short London Bills, and one per cent. on six months' sight Indian Bank Paper.

Brown Rapeseed was quoted yesterday at 32s. per 416 lbs. c.if., sellers, shipment this and or next month to Dunkirk, tone of the market strong.

The Liverpool Cotton market closed steady last evening; Surats quiet; and Arrivals quiet; the day's Sales having aggregated 10,000 bales; East Indians nil. Both spot and arrival prices were all unchanged. The day's Imports were 6,000 bales. The Manchester market was steady.

In New York, the price of ready Mid.-Uplands Cotton advanced 1-16 cent, say to 7 5-16 cents per lb.; while September Futures were 2 points lower, at 7·16 cents per lb. The Receipts at the U. S. Ports were 1,000 bales.

Reuter telegraphs a correction of the total Visible Supply of Cotton for all Europe, the figures for which are 3,100,000 bales, and not 3,310,000 bales as previously wired.

In our local Cotton market, demand from both directions has subsided to a great extent to-day, and only a small business has been reported, though the feeling has been steady at previous rates. The Sales sum up 1,450 bales, of which exporters have credited with 600, consisting of 200 each of Bhownuggur, at Rs. 200; and Akote, at Rs. 194; and 100 each of Pachora, at Rs. 173; and Bengal, at Rs. 162½, while the Mills have taken 850 bales, made up of 250 Veeramgaum, at Rs. 192; 200 each of Bijapore, at Rs. 171½; and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 186; and 100 each of Bengals, at Rs. 172½; and Dharwar, at Rs. 190 per candy.

WHEAT.—The tone of this market, from quiet, has become steady to-day and a modrate export business has transpired; while prices have advanced 1 to 1 anna per cwt., the following being our quotations this evening:—

White Pessy, 91 per cent.	Rs. 4	3 0	per cwt.
Do. 85	" 4	1 0	"
No. 1 Club Delhi	" 3	13 0	"
Red Delhi	" 3	5 0	"
Hard Yellow	" 3	14 6	"
Red Ahmedabad	" 3	11 0	"
Hard Red	" 3	8 0	"

SEEDS.—A large export business has been done to-day in this market, the tone of which has remained firm, at a further advance in the price of Rapeseed of 1 anna per cwt. We now quote as follows:—

Linseed	Rs. 7-15-0 to Rs. 8-1-0	per cwt.
Rapeseed, Yellow Guzerat	" 6-3-0 to " 6-5-0	"
Do. do. Cawnpore	" 6-0-0 to " 6-3-0	"
Do. Red do...	" 5-15-0 to " 6-2-0	"

The Receipts of Produce into Bombay yesterday were as follows:—

Cotton	3,296 bales.
Wheat	11,088 cwts.
Linseed	16,196 "
Rapeseed	8,008 "
Poppyseed	765 "
Groundnuts	3,391 "
Castorseed	518 "
Rice	13,007 "

FREIGHTS are dull. The str. A. J. Balfour, just arrived, has been taken up by speculators at 16s. 6d. per ton, for one picked port.

EXCHANGE opened steady at 1s. 1-32d. for Bank Telegraphic, and 1s. 1 1-32d. to 1-16d. demand, at which we heard of a moderate amount being taken. Three months' sight Credits were quoted at 1s. 1 5-32d., but Mercantile Bills are scarce, and we have heard of but a very limited amount offering. From Calcutta, rates have come partially 1-32d. higher than those ruling here; but the enquiry for Bank remittance from the trade appears to be very limited both here and at the sister Presidency, and as usual on a mail-day, business all round, has been dull, rates closing as follows:—

A resolution is published at some length by the Home Department while reviewing generally the work done in registering births and deaths in the various provinces. Since the issue of the resolution, dated the 26th January, 1881, the census reports show that the provinces, which have gained by emigration, are Assam, Lower Burma, the Punjab, Bombay, the Central Provinces, and Berar; and the provinces, which have lost by emigration are Bengal, Madras, the North-West Provinces, and Oudh. Assam is estimated to have gained 400,000 persons during the decade, most of whom were adults. During the ten years 1881-90 it is estimated that 132,000 persons, of whom 20 per cent. were women, emigrated from India to Lower Burma. In the North-West Provinces the majority of the immigrants were males. Bombay has gained by 108,000 persons. In the Central Provinces there was a net gain of 30,000. NOTES FROM PARIS.

(FROM OUR LADY CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, JUNE 1.

Though India offers rarer treasures of romance and far richer scenic effects than our Western world to the dramatic author, its possibilities have been hitherto very little exploited. However, in Paris, the neglect has been repaired this week. India supplies the subject of a play "Le tresor des Radjahs" to the theatre of the Chatelet, and the motive of "Djelma" to the Grand Opera House. The story of "Djelma," told by M. Charles Somon, and set to music by M. Charles Lefebvre, is like Penelope's—a sad recital of the sorrows of a loving wife, parted by cruel fate from her husband, but faithful, in spite of the attentions of many lovers, to his memory.

There is nothing new in the plot. But people trouble themselves very little about the plots of grand operas. So as there is scope for variety of expression, change of movement, and picturesque setting, it is all right. One overlooks the stilted phraseology, the absence of realism, the absurd traditional gesture. The time will come perhaps when an operatic Sarah Bernhardt will show us the folly of our ways in not expecting nature and truth as well as good vocalization. At present we take what we can get and are satisfied.

Fairly satisfied perhaps is nearer the truth. For one regrets that Mme. Ross Caron does not represent the ideal Djelma—young soelte and impassioned—as well as she gives expression in her pure true soprano voice to the heroine's sentiments. The fact is Madame Caron is too massive, too fat, for the character and the costume; and while she was thrilling out her woes in exquisite harmony, there was always the feeling that her appearance was discordant—that she was over-clad, if not altogether ungraceful. So wonderfully gifted in the one respect, it seems the irony of fate that she is not also an actress. However she is a pretty woman and her singing especially an invocation to the goddess Laksmi was charming.

Madame Heglon who took the part of Ouroaci—a combination of nurse and prophetess—was more in keeping with Indian character. Her voice, a rich contralto, was very pleasing, though less finely modulated than Djelma's, and her figure robed only in a sari of warm reds and browns was very picturesque and characteristic. The men's appearance and acting gave less occasion for unsatisfactory criticism, and their voices were splendid. There could be no feeling but pleasure in listening to their interpretation of their parts, even though the music seemed at times a little monotonous and wanting in definite character.

Whether "Djelma" will make a success as a musical work it is difficult to say. It is an opera with very few striking airs. There is a trio song to Brahma, and a farewell tenor solo, as well as the prayer to Laksmi which ring in one's ears. But little else that clings to the memory except the impression of pleasantly harmonized choruses, and bursts of fiercely chanted prayer possibly recollections of some wild native song introduced to give local colour to the opera.

In the second act a gorgeous scene is introduced in which there is a procession and dances in honour of the goddess Laksmi. This gave opportunity for the appearance of some fascinating ballet girls, got up in Oriental character who gave us specimens of their grace and suppleness in various figures adapted from the Indian. Mille. Saudrini, the prima ballerina, surpassed all in a scarf dance, in which she seemed to be transformed into a butterfly, or something even more evanescent and ethereal—a will o' the wisp, or a spirit—only that it is no credit to such creatures to poise with grace on nothing at all.

It was quite nine o'clock when the representation of "Djelma" commenced. But at eight there was an operatic curtain raiser called "Gwendoline," a picturesque but singularly dull piece—student's work I suppose, or at least composed by some one not yet recognized, and as far as my opinion goes, never likely to be recognized as a genius. However he, not having had the originality to invent an opera on his own account seemed to have had the wisdom to sandwich his dull movements with light touches pirated from old music—forgotten or unknown in France. The principal and most audacious appropriation was the old Irish air to which is set one of Moor's poems "The Legacy," which runs:

When in death I shall calm recline,
O take my heart to my mistress dear;
Tell her it lived upon smiles and wine,
And—

I forgot what exactly happened to the poet's heart; but it came to a bad end for want of suitable nourishment.

The air of this quaint little effusion is very pretty, and it evoked enthusiastic encores for the pretty girl who sang it as a spinning song. It will probably make the name of its appropriator famous—it will, by the time he has secured copyright and farmed it out advantageously so as to secure a royalty from the organ grinders of the universe, fill his pocket with shekels and make him think himself somebody. But "when in death he shall calm recline," and his soul meets the original old Irish bard composer over the border, he will feel rather bad when he has to give up his ill gotten halo. However he will not be a solitary sinner. He will have quite a noble army of his brother pirates to keep him company.

On these warm nights—too much hot for theatre going if one were well advised—there is no house like the opera; for between each act, there is the foyer to promenade in the balconies and staircases to lounge about. It is a wonderful institution—the foyer a levelling, republican institution—for the occupants of boxes, stalls, fauteuils, even the poor little cheap gods of the tip-top of the house, meet all together and for the few moments' socialistic views are recognized, and all share alike the same wealth and luxury—the right to sit on the velvet chairs, to lounge on the marble balustrades, and to parade side by side with duchesses in the gilded ante-rooms. It is a fine democratic principle—in practice I have no doubt the duchesses abhor, and do all they can to avoid contact with their neighbours citizens and citizenesses from the high up etages. But if they want to cool themselves, they must put up with it.

The foyer gives a splendid opportunity for showing off pretty clothes. At the same time there is no obligation to change your coat or frock, if you have no wish to be admired. And a great many people are of this mind—especially the travelling English, Germans, and Americans. I believe we are a constant athorn in the side of the smart Parisians for our brutality in coming to the opera in rough tweed overcoats and cloaks. It is what they call "show—kin," or Anglice shocking. However as Artemus Ward says "you pays your money and you takes your choice." There are plenty of good places at the opera open to the undressed or really overdressed tourist, and why shouldn't he take them.

But I do not at all object to these dainty little ladies turning out for our inspection in white satin, river green moire antique, or the various tints of pink, blue, and violet that are so becoming to them, when they are young and pretty—I was going to add fresh. But they are always fresh, from the day they make their debut in white, to the day they lay by their grandmotherly laced cap and mauve ribbons for a toilette funebre—a ravishing affair, for I dressed for I have never assisted at a French burial. But I am sure French ladies do not go to their graves without a specially-designed costume for the occasion. Dress, the ruling passion of their lives, would no doubt be equally strong in death.

White satin frocks were more numerous than any. Two very pretty young girls had theirs made in an adaptation of the Empire style. With short bodices, and puffy sleeves which their gloves met above the elbow. Their hair was dressed also in the fashion which one sees on pictures of the Empress Josephine—a row of little curls all round the face and neck and the rest of the hair twisted into a tall loop or knot on the crown of the head. It was very striking and pretty.

Another style of sleeve worn with low bodices is full at the shoulder, but then follows the line of the arm, being just puffed so as to make soft wrinkles like a Mousquetaire glove. There were some pretty pink frocks, one made with a baby bodice trimmed with black ribbon and black lace was very effective. A very comely middle-aged lady who had a box full of gentlemen attendants wore a moire antique gown shot with the colours of an oyster shell, so that it looked delicate white and pink and green in various lights. It was trimmed with pearl embroidery round the low bodice, and slightly trained—but Madame, with the prudence of her race, did not allow it to trail when she promenaded in the foyer with us heavy-footed Britishers. She deftly tucked it up with a safety pin at each side, and had no more trouble with it.

The new fans are very simple and at the same time very gorgeous. They have plain black or white mounts, spangled with pink, blue or green metallic dots, which all together make a glory like a sunburst. I saw some others made of ribbons with floating ribbons ending in dew drop beads, and others still made of unrabout feathers—fragile but most elegant. Hand-painted figures and real lace insertion are also as much used as ever. But all the fans are smaller than they used to be, and if possible daintier. A long, narrow fan case of embroidered silk with cords to hang on the wrist or attach to the girdle is another need of the moment. They are some times very pretty, some times very ugly, always very foolish. For they bring two things to mind instead of one—two things to buy instead of one. But now I must hold my peace or shut up—for fin sachets are no doubt a branch of feminine industry, and to a woman all other women's interests are sacred.

TABLE TALK.

[BY WALTER BESANT.]

LONDON, JUNE 1.

The list of Birthday honours is published, and a very long list it is. The Empire may be proud of having so many distinguished sons. There are 108 names in all, many of whom, however, represent promotion, and have already figured in previous lists. If we analyse the list we find the following result. The absence of anything like proportion is rather startling:—

Political Honours	9
Official (chiefly to members of the Civil Service)	13
Special Services	3
Municipal	4
Army	39
Navy	3
Indian and Colonial	33
Literature	0
Art	1
Science	0
Architecture	0
Archæology	1
Medicine	1
Journalism	1
Engineers	0
Law	0
Other branches of intellectual work	0

Practically, the whole field of intellectual achievement is ignored. During the past year, however, literature has been honoured in the person of Sir John Robert Seeley, a fact which one remembers with gratitude. Law takes its distinctions on the appointment of an Attorney or Solicitor-General, or that of a new Judge. Taken as a whole, the list means one of two things: Either that intellectual achievement in every branch contains no names worthy of being placed beside these most illustrious civil servants and officers of the army; or, that intellectual achievement is in itself unworthy of receiving the national distinctions. As for the deplorable blight which has apparently fallen upon the navy, if I were in the House I should certainly ask what steps it is proposed to take in order to restore the efficiency and intelligence of the Royal Navy, the low level of which is clearly proved by the fact that there are only three men in it, compared with thirty-nine in the army, who can be found worthy of the smallest distinction. Surely this is a very serious point—even a national disaster. However, as Sir Vernon Harcourt has pointed out so truly, some get titles who don't deserve any; and some don't who do—and in this way a rough kind of justice is done. Besides, the haphazard method prevents grumbling, and enables people who can't get titles and distinctions to sneer and scoff at those who do. Which always brings consolation of a kind.

One who advertises in fields along the railway lines writes to defend himself. The defence amounts to this: Farmers and fishermen get money by letting out their fields and their sails for these advertisements. He says that his agents have put up his notices too closely. He intimates that he has done enough of this kind of advertisement. And he calls upon those who object to the spoiling of the fields to consider the ugliness of the town. One thing at a time; we may not like the ugliness of the town, but that is no reason why we should desire to destroy the beauty of the fields. His real defence is, of course, partly that it has so far paid him and partly that it helps the farmers and the fishermen. The former class want help very much indeed—any little help that can be got anyhow—and I do not suppose that any associated expostulation or individual expostulation will prevail against an advertiser who wants to push his wares or a farmer who is offered a windfall of a few pounds a year. These are very stubborn customers to tackle, and, therefore, the field advertisements will, I suppose, continue. Quoth the St. James's Gazette on the subject:

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where posters flourish and where crops won't pay."

A secret plot, a conspiracy, has been going on unsuspected for a long time. The conspirators are a small band of Americans. It has been revealed to the Times by an Englishman, one Edmund Gosse, perhaps himself a co-conspirator—from all I know of him I believe him quite capable of joining the conspiracy. It appears that the arch conspirator, Mr. F. Holland Day, of Norwood, Massachusetts, concerted with the late Mr. Lowell a design, secretly to prepare a monument to Keats, and to present it to this country, partly by way of honour to the poet and partly as a gentle reminder to ourselves of our culpable neglect. This design was communicated to a small number of American artists and literary men and women, the result of which is a marble bust which Mr. Day has now brought over to this country. It will be put up in Hampstead Church as soon as the bracket for it is ready. It is curious that the secret should have been kept so well and so long. The gift is generous and conceived in the best spirit possible, that of claiming joint possession of every great and good thing written in the common tongue. What Keats gave us he gave to all the English-speaking world. What Longfellow gave his countrymen he also gave to us. We have given a Lowell monument and a Longfellow monument to Westminster Abbey. Let us accept this American gift in the spirit with which it is offered. The centenary of Keats's birth is October 29, 1895. We shall, I hope, anticipate that date when we assemble to do him honour.

The Weekly Sun has found a poet in a coal mine. That is to say, he has been in a coal mine, but can work there no longer in consequence of an accident which has disabled him. The poem published in the paper is called "Life at Play." It is on the old, old theme, of which the world is never weary, of the approach of spring. Here are one or two stanzas:

The field flowers rise from out their beds
Of undulating green,
And shyly lift their pretty heads
To look upon the scene.
All things are gay,
For earth has doffed her garb uncouth,
And Beauty crowns and kisses youth,
And Life's at Play.
The world looks young as golden gleams
Of sunshine wreathe her brow:
And Autumn's wealth of fruitage teems,
And Age seems younger now.
All things are gay;
The living rules the dead again;
The dreams of youth palsate the brain
While Life's at Play.

These lines, tuneful and simple, were written, I have said, by a young man who was a driver in a coal mine. He is twenty-two years of age; he is in ill-health; he wants a larger education than he has yet received. A subscription has been opened for him, without his knowledge, by the paper which published his poem. I think there is promise in these lines. Let us all help to give this young writer a new and better start in life, with a year or two to study, learn, meditate, and recover health under easier conditions. Who would not rejoice in helping a humble lad to become—perchance—a great poet? The editor of the Weekly Sun, Tudor-street, E.C., has promised to receive the contributions of those who love poetry and the makers of poetry.

A very good suggestion. "Amphitryon" proposes, in the columns of the Times, that, considering the number of invitations to dinner at this festive (or deadly) time of year, and the length of time that one is asked beforehand, reply should be sent till a week before. In this way one would be able to choose and select one's dinner. The suggestion is most simple and truly beautiful. Mrs. Longbore, for instance, invites one six weeks beforehand. One cannot possibly plead an engagement. The dinners are tedious, and stupid, and heavy. Yet one has got to go; and on this very night—most maddening!—"Amphitryon" himself gives one of his delightful dinners, where the liveliest of people are always to be met—in short, bright little dinners with a little menu, a little wine, and everything of the best. Let us immediately adopt the plan and choose our dinners. It will teach people to cultivate the art of dining, which rests upon two main points—the selection and grouping of the company, and the selection and grouping or right following of the dishes. These should be few—very few—but carefully chosen. No man desires any more a huge banquet; no man desires to sit for four hours between two strangers, quite stupid, or at all events inaccessible. Another suggestion, not so good, is to refuse a long invitation on the ground that you will perhaps be out of town at that week. It is quite a safe thing to say, and can offend no one. On the other hand, I think that "Amphitryon's" plan is the simpler.

Eastney Farm, near Haslemere,
May 31, 1905.

Dearest Dorothy,—I am happy to tell you that, in the general rush for the deserted farmhouses in the country, we have secured one that seems to possess every advantage. It is cheap—we get it for £10 a year; it has not been deserted for more than four or five years, the last tenant having clung with singular tenacity to this holding. It had been theirs first as yeomen, and next as tenants for the last 500 years. They went out with a batch of pauper emigrants to Mashonaland. Since their departure the farm has been quite deserted. Our house stands in very lovely scenery, on a ridge of ground between two valleys. It is a pretty ivy covered, gabled, two storey cottage, with a lovely great kitchen. A good deal must be done to make it habitable again, but the roof is sound, and the structure still uninjured. There is a garden quite overrun, but, as Walter Pater says of autumn, it is opulent in decay. The orchard has also gone wild, and the farm buildings, stables, and yards are in sad decay. We shall restore only what we want, and this will not be much. The fields, which cover about 400 acres, are completely grown over with a wild vegetation, hiding hedges and paths backed with brambles. There were said to be wild creatures in the woods, but, I suppose, nothing to hurt a body. Of course, we shall leave everything just as it is. Quite useless to attempt any cultivation when we can buy fruit, flowers, vegetables—everything—at a tenth part of what it costs to grow them in this country. I suppose the inventions which have enabled half a dozen crops in the year to be produced in Australia and to be brought here in twenty-four hours are of some advantage. They always say so in the House when the grumblers talk about the ruin of the country. Besides, it is impossible to attempt any cultivation, because there is not a labourer left for thirty or forty miles round. However, my father says that he will clear a little of the old flower garden and a part of the orchard, so that we may have some of the pleasure of seeing the flowers and the apple blossom.

About half a mile from the farm is the village street. The cottages have now fallen into absolute ruin; they stand with open doors, hanging shutters, dismantled roofs—a melancholy sight. The people have long since emigrated or found their way to our big towns, where they swell the overgrown and awfully dangerous class of the unemployed. The old church just beyond the village is the most charmingly picturesque ruin you ever saw. I will sketch it for you. The roof of the nave has fallen in; that of the chancel is kept up, I believe, by an immense ivy, which grows up among the rafters; the painted windows are unbroken, but the monuments of the ancient family which held the manor are grown over by a rank and unwholesome vegetation. Behind the church is the house of the former squire. He left it ten years ago, when he went through the Bankruptcy Court, and he was unable to let the great rambling place; so it is gone to the dogs. The poor man is dead, and his children have gone abroad, so that no one looks after it. The roof is going, and the woodwork is decaying fast; the furniture, pictures, and things were taken out and sold for a song in 1868, that unlucky year when all the country people wanted to sell everything they had and all at once, and most of them ran away from the old country. Well they are gone; the country is deserted, and these lovely farmhouses are left for us city people. The park is covered with a sort of jungle; the deer are said to be herds of deer, but they are very wild.

It is rather sad to stroll about these deserted lawns and grass-grown walks. Of course, it is a great triumph for the social economists to get food supplies of all sorts so cheap—even green peas and cabbages from the Cape cheaper than they can be grown here. I say nothing; but I sometimes ask myself whether we have really done well in destroying the agricultural interest, sending abroad our stalwart labourers who made such splendid soldiers, and in ruining the old families, which certainly did play a noble part in creating the glory and honour of the country—poor country! The young men of the towns are a miserable, puny breed; our soldiers . . .; but it is no use lamenting. The thing is done. My father, who has just come home, tells me that the long-dreaded war with Russia has been averted. We have agreed to surrender the Indian Empire, which we can no longer defend. In return, they promise to confine their enterprise for the future to Asia, which is now a Russian province, with markets closed. Come and see me soon. We will forget the melancholy of national humiliation. There are some very charming people—importers of New Zealand produce—not more than two miles from us. You will find the spot delightfully rural. There is a lovely stream with a little waterfall; and the weather is perfect. But the pater sits gloomily and curses the economists of the last generation.—Always yours devotedly,

CICELY.

The date of this letter, which was written, I perceive, eleven years hence, and will not be delivered till eleven years have passed, shows that Old England was slow to follow the example of New England. Already the deserted farms of that country are being taken by the city people of New York and Boston for country residences. Of course, it will be the natural and inevitable end to which our own disused farms must be put. Since the country can no longer be cultivated it must be deserted. Then it will be sparsely inhabited by people who belong to towns and are engaged in trade and in the professions which live upon trade. When trade goes—well, I don't quite know what will happen then. Deluge, Chaos, and the Eternal Glorification of Nineteenth Century Political Economy.

CHARGE AGAINST A NATIVE OFFICER.

A General Court-Martial assembled at Bangalore on Tuesday for the purpose of trying Jemadar Streeramoloo, 4th Madras Pioneers. The Court was composed of eleven native officers. Colonel Chaplin, Deputy Judge Advocate General, officiated as Judge Advocate to the Court, Colonel Porteous, 4th Pioneers prosecuted, and Captain Eardley Wilmot, 2nd Madras Lancers, was interpreter. The prisoner was undefended. The chief witness in the case was Colonel Austin, Assistant Adjutant-General for Musk try, on whose report the charge was brought against the prisoner. From his evidence it appeared that he was out on the ranges on May 12th while some recruits of the 4th Pioneers were going through a course of musketry. Four targets were being used, and witness watched the shooting, signalling, and scoring. The late Lieutenant Groves, who committed suicide, was the superintending officer on the occasion, and prisoner had charge of two of the targets. On looking at the butt memoranda witness was not satisfied that all was right, and he mentioned the fact to Lieutenant Groves. After some conversation he went to the butts accompanied by Mr. Graves, the prisoner, and others, and on checking the target from behind, as it had been already patched up in front, he found that the first target contained 31 hits and the second 40 more. The prisoner on being questioned pointed to some holes which he said were double hits. Witness admitted only one of them as a double hit, and said that even that would not help his case. He asked Mr. Groves to make note of these things and to be careful, as he might be put on his oath as regards them. He also told him to report the matter to his commanding officer. Witness, after he got home, reported the matter to the Officer Commanding the District and the Officer Commanding the 4th Pioneers. Other witnesses were examined, who bore out Colonel Austin's evidence. The case is proceeding, and is likely to last several days.

DISFIGURING THE STATUE OF THE QUEEN-EMPRESS.

The Inspector of Police in charge of the Triplicane Division has reported on the marks daubed on the statue of the Queen-Empress at Chepauk. It appears the marks are those of the Vishnuvite sect of Brahmins, being two white lines running parallel (known as namathi) with a red line in the middle (called thirooroomon). These marks are in three places—on the forehead, neck, and breast. The Inspector says that the daubing must be the work of some Hindu, and was done in a spirit of puja or worship. He avers that no other interpretation can be placed on the act. This is not the first time that such smearing has taken place. Some time ago a carpenter was caught garlanding the statue, and marks similar to those now found on the figure were detected then. The man explained that he was engaged shipping the great Maharanee who, he expected, would protect him and give him plenty of work. Mr. Fleming, the present Inspector of Triplicane, in whose division the Chepauk Park is situated, says that he himself has noticed people burning incense and breaking cocoanuts before the statue, prostrating themselves and doing puja generally to it. He has told them to desist and to go about their business. Apparently therefore the present marks (made with powder which the natives call "beauty powder") have not been put on with any intention of showing disloyalty or disrespect to the sovereign of the land but just the contrary.—Madras Mail.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE MARBLE ROCKS.

The following are the further particulars concerning the lamentable accident which happened at the Marble Rocks. Three privates of the Scottish Rifles named Wylde, Hughes and Goudie went out for a pleasure excursion to the Marble Rocks, and went on the river in the boat kept there for visitors. At this time of the year particular care has to be taken not to disturb the bees which have for many years established themselves in large hives fastened to the marble cliffs at a considerable height above the surface of the water. The men, probably unaware of the danger they ran, insisted on smoking while passing beneath the hives, though entreated by the native boatmen in charge of the boat not to do so. The smoke very soon attracted the bees, who came down in swarms upon the occupants of the boat. The surviving soldiers say that the natives at once dived into the water and made good their escape, and though the latter deny having deserted the boat the circumstances that they are known to be excellent swimmers and escaped unhurt strongly corroborate the story told by the former. However that may be, the soldiers continued in the boat for about five minutes after the attack began, and then finding that the bees continued to attack them in great numbers they resolved to jump overboard and try and swim out of reach. Wylde and Hughes were the first to jump out, and as they could swim they saved themselves after a hard struggle. Goudie could not swim, but seeing his companions leaving the boat, and being hard pressed by the bees, followed them into the water, hoping, it is supposed, that his friends would be able to help him. They had all they could do to save themselves, especially Hughes, who only succeeded in keeping himself afloat by divesting himself of all his clothing in the water. Goudie was thus left unassisted, and was drowned after Wylde had seen him sink and rise two or three times. The body has not yet been recovered. The numerous crocodiles in the spot may account for this. Hughes, who is very badly stung, and Wylde are now in hospital, doing well.

A waterspout burst over the town of Pueblo Colorada, one midnight, with disastrous results. The rivers overflowed their banks and quays, and the lower part of the town was immediately flooded. Four bridges were carried away in the first tremendous rush of the swollen streams, and hundreds of houses speedily collapsed. It is beyond doubt that many persons lost their lives, but no reliable estimate can yet be formed of the number. At three o'clock, the other morning, the water in the flooded rivers was rising at the rate of six feet an hour. A despatch from Vancouver states that the River Frazer has overflowed its banks, flooding an enormous area of land, and causing much damage to crops and farm buildings, and considerable loss of life.

When a candidate for the Civil Service of Corea succeeds in passing his examinations, this cheerful little ceremony follows in Seoul, according to the observations of one of the British Customs officers:—The candidate is introduced by his friends to one of the examiners, who amid much merriment, buffets the young man about, tears his clothes, and crushes his hat. Sometimes the candidate's face and clothes are painted all over with ink. The examiner, in that case, flicks powdered white soap from an open fan over the candidate's face, where, of course, it sticks, owing to the moistness of the ink. When the time for respite has arrived, a basin of water is brought. At this sign the whole assembly marches to the candidate's house, where he is washed and dressed in his best attire, and for the rest of the day led round to visit his friends in state and to receive their congratulations.

MILITARY BOOKS.

"Tactics as Applied to Schemes," by Captain J. Sherston, the Rifle Brigade [Gale and Polden, Limited, Aldershot.] This little volume is one of the well-known red-covered series of half-crown military works, issuing from the Aldershot press. The author, who is D. A. A. G. for rifle instruction, Bengal, sets forth as his object the assistance of officers in applying the principles contained in the drill books to the solving of tactical schemes as set in the examinations for promotions. He therefore writes, under the natural hypothesis that the subject-matter in the drill books has been previously studied, and that the reader does not open the book for mere elementary information. A pocket in the back page of the cover gives a detached map on the scale of four inches to the mile of the seven Tactics Schemes, which have been set in India during the last three years. The locality chosen for illustrating the schemes is one likely to be well-known to military officers, having Wantage Downs as a centre, and Epson Downs as one of the southern boundaries. By permission of the Director of Military Education, Captain Sherston describes the schemes with great detail. The chapter detailing the space and time required for formations will be of great value, whilst officers who are called upon to conduct operations against dacoits and frontier tribes will do well to give careful heed to that portion of the brochure, which deals with such subjects as savage warfare, raids, surprises, and ambushes, requisitioning, bivouacs and convoys.

Another addition to Gale and Polden's Military Series is "The Non-Commissioned Officer's Guide to Promotion," by Captain G. D'Arcy-Evans of the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Rifles. The volume goes forth with the seal and approval of his Highness the Duke of Cambridge, who has caused a letter to be written to the General Officer Commanding at Aldershot, expressing his opinion that this useful book should be brought into garrison libraries, reading and recreation rooms, in order that the young soldiers may have an opportunity of studying it. The volume is somewhat more bulky than most of the series to which it belongs, extending to over 319 closely printed pages, and is illustrated with numerous plates. The questions and answers of which it is largely composed are based on the latest editions of the Queen's regulations on infantry drill, rifle exercises, regulations for encampments, field service infantry, regimental transport duties, and musketry regulations. If the young "non-com" minds what he is about this work, carefully studied, will supply a lever, whereby he may rise from lance-corporal to corporal and from corporal to sergeant. Of course, the information it contains could be obtained by the young candidate for examination for promotion by the study of the official military books detailed in the Syllabus, Queen's Regulations. It is not, however, every aspirant for promotion who can spare the money to obtain these books, or who has the patience to wade through them to pick out the required portions; hence the value of the compact and readable volume before us. The author claims with justice that containing as it does the actual text of each subject in sufficiently ample detail, and the questions and answers appertaining thereto, its study will enable candidates to intelligently answer such questions as may be put to them by the examining Board.

A neat little volume, identical in purport with that of Captain D'Arcy Evans, has singularly enough been issued lately, at the Civil and Military Gazette Press, Lahore, being a new edition of "Handbooks to the Examinations for Promotion of Non-Commissioned-Officers." The authorship is the joint work of Captain DuMoulin, Royal Sussex Regiment, and Captain Reay, Adjutant of the Wiltshire Regiment, who were assisted in its production by several Cavalry and Royal Artillery officers. The book goes forth like its rival, with official benedictions, and the Adjutant-General in India commends it to commanding officers as useful for regimental libraries and reading-rooms. The authors have admirably succeeded in the aim set forth by them in the preface—to combine in one volume the whole of the duties necessary for non-commissioned officers of Cavalry, Royal Artillery, and Infantry, for acting Bombardiers and for Lance Corporals, at such a price as will not be prohibitive. They have preferred to place before the "non-com's" the gist of each paragraph as quoted in the syllabus rather than transferring bodily whole pages out of the various text-books. The book is fully equal to its contemporary hailing from Aldershot, and in some respects—notably in the conciseness of the information, and the number of illustrations—it is decidedly better. The industrious corporal may, therefore, congratulate himself, that in these days of low exchange, he need not lose money by purchasing Captain D'Arcy-Evans' work, when one may be obtained in the country which will answer his purpose better, inasmuch as wherever the duties of a non-commissioned officer, as laid down in the text books, differ from those at home, the answers to the questions have been rendered agreeable to the custom of the service in India.

"Modern Tactics," by Captain H. R. Gall, late of the 5th Fusiliers, is a far more portly and ambitious volume than any of those we have mentioned. Published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., Limited, 13, Waterloo Place, S. W., the book extends to some 450 quarto pages, and has now reached a third edition, having been entirely re-written and revised in accordance with the Artillery, Cavalry, and Infantry Drill Books of 1893. The second edition was replete with plates, but no less than thirteen new ones have been added. Other new matter includes chapters on orders, improved firearms and smokeless powder, mounted infantry and machine guns, the supply of ammunition to infantry in the field; savage warfare; and field engineering. Unfortunately the book was issued just a little too soon for a chapter to be devoted to the invention of the bullet-proof coat, proudly brought forward by Herr Dowe as calculated to revolutionise the science of warfare. With that signal exception, the work is quite up to date, one very valuable feature being the series of tables at the commencement giving the tactical organisation and equipment of the British Army for home defence and service abroad, compiled from the latest Army Orders on the subject. Whether it is wise to publish to the world information of this character is a point which General Wolseley, to whom the volume is dedicated, may be left to settle. Captain Gall has not contented himself with giving technical details of the best methods to be pursued under every variety of circumstance in which an army may be placed; he has taken the wiser course of illustrating his meaning by references to past military episodes. Thus the chapter on marches is brightened up and rendered interesting, even to men who have never carried a gun or drawn a sword, by brief descriptions of such well-known events as General Gourko's march to Orkanie, that of Lord Roberts to Kandahar, and that of Lord Wolseley to Tel-el-Kebir. As showing how dependent is success in the field on the marching powers of an army, the author recalls a story of the Duke of Wellington. When asked what he considered the most important requirement of a soldier in time of war, the Iron Duke, said "Boots,"; on being asked what he placed next in importance boots, he replied, "Another pair." To students at Sandhurst the tactic papers set for the recent Staff College Entrance, Promotion, and Militia Competitive Examinations will be of considerable value. It is also noticeable that great attention has been given to "applied tactics," numerous schemes having been worked out. In the chapter on "Orders" the author is careful to point out that circumstances may arise after an order has been issued which will render its execution undesirable, and contrary to its spirit and intention. We are all familiar with the noble lines in which Tennyson says of the Light Brigade at Balaclava, it was

Their's not to make reply,
Their's but to do and die,

but however necessary this spirit of unquestioning obedience may be on the part of the private soldier, the commander is not required, in Captain Gall's view, to carry out an order from a superior if, for instance, the difficulty or risk of its execution would be so great as to amount to a moral impossibility. In who have said things such as Mr. Punch includes among those which one would "rather have left unsaid." The lady who asked him to give his most interesting little sketch, "The Drinking Fountain," and who had to be told that that sketch is Mr. George Grossmith's, hardly distinguished herself so much in this way as another lady who said she thought he could give a two hours' entertainment at a stretch, adding that she had had a conjuror the year before who had done so. This was no less humiliating than the remark of a negro minstrel—"'Ard work our perfeshun, Mr. Grain. But there, I'd sooner do twenty of your shows in a room than one of mine outdoors."

A TELEGRAM, dated Lahore, 19th June, says:—No mails from Europe, Bombay, or Madras reached Lahore or any station on the N.-W. R. west of the Beas, to-day, owing to the Rohe Nullah bridge, about six miles on the west of the Beas, having been washed away at about 11 o'clock, last night. All traffic had to be transhipped, thus causing considerable delay.

DR. SCHWEINFURTH, the great German explorer, is now in Alexandria, on his return from his latest excursion in Abyssinia. He is in excellent health, and speaks very highly of the prospects of the Indian colony of Erythrea.

GENERAL BOISDEFFRE, Chief of the French General Staff, will, it is semi-officially announced, be one of the foreign spectators of the approaching great summer manœuvres, to be held within the military circle of St. Petersburg.

THE art furniture and pictures of the late Mr. Josse are being sold by auction in Paris. Mr. Josse was a Frenchman who left France in consequence of the coup d'etat, and became a naturalised Englishman, stood not long ago for a North of England constituency, and created an important Anglo-French business in Oxford Street. He was a man of very liberal views, and had many devoted English friends, one of whom was Sir Edward Watkin. Mr. Josse's taste as a collector was chiefly exercised on eighteenth century works of art. He had a unique collection of drawings in "sanguine" by Watteau and Fragonard, Drouais, and Greuze. The bidding for them was high. A small composition of heads, three of which are youths, and five of ladies with their hair dressed high and powdered, was sold for £800. The heads of three girls wearing Tuscan straw hats fetched £960; three ladies, young and pretty, in crayons, £480; and a sketch on whitey-brown paper of a lady, also fair and young, £280. This figure was a study for "L'Embarquement pour Cythere," the oil-painting of which is at the Louvre. A small "gouache," by Baudoin, representing Mme. de Pompadour in the theatre of her small apartments in the Palace of Versailles, fetched £640; a pen sketch in "bistre," by Freudenberg, £280; a pen sketch toned with Indian ink, by Greuze, of a paralytic, £320; a study sketch, by Fragonard, for "La Lecon de Danse," £436. The sketches and drawings thus far sold have brought in over £10,450.

"Is this Thy Day" were the words on which Father Ignatius, speaking recently in the Portman Rooms, grounded an eloquent address, in which he denounced the London season and all its ways and works. Nor did he even spare the Church, which, he declared, was growing ashamed of Christ, and was descending to the level of popular agnoticism, if not of actual materialism. Having drawn a vivid picture of Jerusalem as Christ beheld it in all its natural beauty and gorgeousness of religious ceremonial, when, turning from the visible magnificence of the present, He wept over the dreadful fate and awful sufferings which it was storing up for itself, the preacher declared that the vice of which even professing Christians were not now ashamed was preparing London for a fate as direful as that which overtook Sodom. It was the vice and the sham religion of the fashionable crowd which prepared the bomb of the Anarchist, but so long as it did not explode in their midst, they did not seem to care. But a great social, political, religious, and physical upheaval was surely at hand. He appealed to those present not to let the day of individual "visitation" pass, but to turn with all their heart to Him who said, "I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth; turn ye and live."

PRESIDENT CARNOT has at last got on its legs his tenth Ministry in less than seven years. This stop-gap Moderate Government, which its friends hope will survive till the November Presidential elections, desires, no doubt, to be labelled "Republican Reconciliation." Unkind critics have called ex-schoolmaster Dupuy's little company "Dr. Birch and his young friends." The Premier himself is only forty-two, the Chancellor of the Exchequer is thirty-three, and the Foreign and Colonial Secretaries have just turned forty. None of the Ministers, however, are suspected of having been "touched" in the Panama business, and this is something.

THE sudden death is announced of the Hon. Roden Noel. He has obtained considerable distinction in literature. A son of the first Earl of Gainsborough, he was born at [illegible] at Cambridge University, where he had a successful career. For some years he held the post of Groom of the Privy Chamber in Ordinary to the Queen. In 1863, Mr. Noel made his first essay in letters, and his "Behind the Veil and Other Poems" was warmly commended by the critics for its freshness and delicacy of conception and execution. He then published Beatrice" and "The Red Flag," and his enthusiasm being stirred by the heroic career of Dr. Livingstone, he published "Livingstone in Africa." This volume was succeeded in the course of the ensuing twelve years by the following works: "The House of Ravensburg," "A Little Child's Monument," "A Philosophy of Immortality," "Songs of the Heights and Deeps," and "Essays on Poetry and Poets." In 1888, Mr. Noel published "A Modern Faust and Other Poems," and he was also the author of the volume on "Lord Byron" in the Great Writers Series. Mr. Noel was a man of varied culture and of a gentle, sympathetic, and benevolent nature. He will be greatly missed by those who had the privilege of his friendship.

THE arrival of Messrs. Shaw and Weiss from the Wattana Mines, on Friday last, says the Siam Free Press, of the 22nd ultimo, has caused some little excitement in Bangkok, owing to the magnificent success of their work, and the splendid samples of gold ore which they have brought from the mines. Some of the oldest and most experienced residents, competent mining men, and scientific experts, have been utterly astonished at the quality of the gold ore which is now being displayed for a few days at "Villa Sans Souci." The discovery is deemed little less than marvellous, and the richness of the mine promises to exceed by far that of any other now known to exist, and to place Siam in the front rank of mining States. Before the magnificent specimens of nearly three hundred pounds of gold quartz even the most sceptical sneerer at Siam gold ventures has been convinced, and predicts that Wattana will be found to be the true Mount Ophir of the prospector's dreams and the richest mine in the Far East. From the three hundred pounds of quartz which are now disp[illegible]ayed as samples at the residence of Mr. Shaw, it is calculated that 20 ounces of pure gold will be obtained. And from a general average made by M. Fernand Weiss he has estimated that ten tons of gold quartz will yield on an average 50 ounces of pure gold, that is, one ton will yield 2,490 grains. These figures, adds M. Weiss, are a fair average, and, if anything, below the result which may be expected according to the quality of the quartz examined.

A FRENCH savant, M. d'Arsonval, in a communication to the Paris Academy of Sciences, calls attention to the fact that in cases where persons are subjected to the shock of a powerful electric current, death, as in cases of drowning, is often only apparent. Not long ago, he declares, a workman at Saint Denis, after having been subjected for several minutes to a current of 2,500 volts, with a frequency of fifty-five periods, was restored to consciousness in a very short space of time, although for three-quarters of an hour he had been left alone, as it was supposed he was dead. It was a Dr. Laborde who was called in, and who resorted to artificial respiration with complete success. M. d'Arsonval, therefore, considers it is important to bear in mind that persons who have been rendered insensible by electric discharges should be treated like those who are rescued from drowning. He thinks that criminals who are "electrocuted" in America are in reality alive after the shock, although they remain insensible, and die shortly in the absence of restoratives.

THE Madrid bull-ring was, on Sunday afternoon, (May 27), a scene of great excitement. The first bull was a splendid animal of the Miura breed of Andalusia. The bull killed four horses, and showed much fierceness when the banderilleros fixed their darts on his neck. Sixteen thousand spectators (says the Madrid correspondent of the Standard) anxiously watched the celebrated matador, Manuel Garcia Espartero, a fine handsome man of twenty-eight years, as he approached the bull with his usual daring, and was knocked down. Recovering his feet, he attacked the bull again close to a dead horse, which prevented Espartero from taking proper precautions as he plunged his Toledo blade to the hilt in the shoulder of the animal, which, though dying, caught, tossed, and gored the bull-fighter. The unfortunate Espartero was carefully raised, bleeding profusely from a ghastly wound in the stomach. His hands were clenched, his features rigid, and his groans were dreadful. On arriving at the infirmary attached to the bull-ring Espartero was speechless, and the doctor pronounced his wound mortal. Priests promptly administered extreme unction, in the presence of many gorgeously attired bull-fighters, all kneeling, bare-headed, and deeply moved. Before he expired, Espartero murmured the name of his sweetheart, whom he was to have married shortly, and who lives in Seville with the aged mother of the deceased bull-fighter. Espartero was only fourteen when he showed a decided vocation for the calling, in which he became a banderillo at seventeen and a matador at twenty. He had made a large fortune and contemplated retiring next year. After the death of Espartero, notwithstanding the intense excitement among the public, the corrida was continued. The bulls showed much fight, killed fifteen horses, and knocked down and seriously bruised two other bull-fighters.

THE BOMBAY MUNICIPALITY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—With reference to the proceedings of the Bombay Municipal Corporation, held, on the afternoon of 18th instant, and published on the 19th idem, in your valued paper, I am glad that "Councillor," in your yesterday's issue, has dwelt upon the remarkably refreshing discussion which then arose regarding the services of the present acting Accountant, Mr. Pearson, and the resolution which was sprung by the Hon'ble Mr. Mehta, and carried by a majority of 29 against 12, that "in the opinion of the Corporation the post of Chief Accountant of the Municipality ought to be filled by an officer possessing higher or more special training, experience, and financial ability."

In the first place, the conditions of affairs since Mr. William Maidment held the post of Controller of Municipal Accounts, guide, and financial advisor of the Commissioner, in former years, and on a higher salary than Mr. Sorabjee Nowrojee Cooper, the present Chief Accountant, draws, have materially altered. I can speak on this subject with confidence as I was then a member of the Worshipful Bench of Justices, and as such helped to control the affairs of the Municipality, and with the exception of Dr. Blaney and Mr. Byramjee Nusserwanjee Serval, I do not think that any of the present members had then any voice in Municipal matters, and knows exactly what really passed. In those days, there were not two auditors on Rs. 5,000 each per annum, as we have now in fact no auditors at all, nor any Standing Committee like the present able body, and the members of which are paid Rs. 30 each for every weekly meeting attended. I cannot, therefore, understand why the Hon'ble Messrs. Mehta and Javerilal Vimishanker should state that the Chief Accountant must be a man, who thoroughly knows finances, and can advise the Municipal Commissioner as to whether certain investments will be profitable or otherwise, and how the funds should be invested and manipulated. In the face of these facts, it is a matter of surprise to me that the Hon'ble Mr. Mehta and his confreres should have recorded the vote they have done, seeing that the appointment of Controller with its more serious responsibilities has been done away with, and the post actually reduced to that of a mere book-keeper, the nomination to which appointment is now vested in the Commissioner and not in the Corporation as before, and also in the light of the Commissioner's most courteous and clear explanation in response to the resolution passed at the previous meeting, which reads as follows: "The Commissioner was satisfied of Mr. Pearson's proficiency as an accountant as well as of his general ability before he appointed him. We may mention that when he received charge from Sir Charles Ollivant, the latter particularly dwelt on Mr. Pearson's capacity as an accountant, and indicated him as a proper person to take charge of Mr. Sorabjee Cooper's place during absence on long leave," and yet after resorting to various tactics in springing the resolution at the meeting "without the usual notice," and raising the discussion referred to which was tantamount to a slur on the Commissioner and a veil of doubt on the recommendation of Sir Charles Ollivant in favour of Mr. Pearson, so much so that Messrs. Cuffe, Roughton, Hamilton, and other European members were moved to take sides. Mr. Mehta concludes by saying that "he never said there was no promise made by Sir Charles Ollivant. The latter was in the habit of committing to paper whatever suggestions he thought were likely to guide his successor, and if such a one were made in the present case, it would have carried a greater weight, which a mere suggestion in a chat or conversation would not carry." In fact, if any one can charac'e ise Mr. Acworth's statement in his memorandum that Sir Charles Ollivant "particularly dwelt on Mr. Pearson's capacity as an accountant, and indicated him as the proper person to take Mr. Sorabjee's place," as a mere "suggestion in a chat or conversation," it is as it were adding insult to injury or perverting the Queen's English. The Government very rightly select an officer from the cream of the Civil Service to fill the important post of Commissioner of the Municipality, and if nothing else the prestige of the appointment should be maintained and due weight given to the dictum of the said official rather than that an alien element with which the Corporation, I am sorry to notice, is at present filled, should breathe a breath wherever it likes and ridicule the proceedings of so august a body as the city fathers of Bombay. Probably, as mentioned by "Councillor" in his letter, if the notice of the vote had been given, the majority which carried the resolution would have constituted the minority, seeing that Mr. Pearson's abilities as an accountant are quite as equal to those of Mr. Sorabjee N. Cooper, the Chief Accountant, and under such circumstances his selection is the best that could have been made, and this I assert from my own knowledge of Mr. Pearson's services and abilities, when I was myself a member of the Corporation, nominated by Government a few years ago.

If we take for example, the Local Boards of each district under the self-government scheme, which are usually presided over by the Magistrate and Collector for the time being, one can hardly imagine the mock and respectful raisos who constitute its members, arrogating to themselves a tone of captious independence against their president whom they have invariably been found to respect in the highest degree as the constituted representative of Government, and I am of opinion instead of our Zoroastrian members monopolizing all the appointments in the Municipality, there should be a fair proportion of each community so as to give a healthy tone to its departments. Why should the auditors, executive engineer, chief accountant, deputy accountant, and several other important offices in our Municipality be held by Parsees alone as they are at present, when there are so many able persons in the other communities? We have now nearly twenty Parsee Municipal councillors; and the clever and shrewd leader of the house of the opposition is also a Parsee gentleman. I submit that both the auditors should not be Parsees, especially when they have to audit the accounts of a Parsee chief accountant, although I confess that our present Parsee auditors are both upright and respectable gentlemen. In my opinion, one of the auditors should always be a European and a professional man, if obtainable. As regards the duties of the present chief accountant they are such as any experienced book-keeper of a mercantile firm, or a bank accountant should easily be able to perform satisfactorily, and it is a fact, as I have already explained, that the Legislature never contemplated that the accountant should be a person who, as my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Javerilal said, should understand finances, and be able to advise the Commissioner as to whether certain investments would be profitable or otherwise, and when to buy and sell the same! We have in the present Corporation several gentlemen, who are quite competent in financial matters to assist or enlighten the Commissioner, who is himself a good financier, such as Messrs. Wacha, Cotton, Cuffe, Javerilal, Harkissondas, and a few others, who are all first-class business-men and financiers, and if these are not sufficient the Commissioner, if he needs advice cannot do better than send for and consult Mr. Premchund Roychund, Messrs. Shapoorjee and Tilockchund, or Mr. Merwanjee Rustomjee Dalal, all able brokers and financiers, as to the nature of investments and the proper time for purchasing or realizing Government Securities.—Yours, &c.,

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The discussion at the Municipal Corporation, reported in your issue of the 19th instant, anent the Commissioner's appointment of Mr. Pearson as acting chief accountant, is suggestive of reflections, which seem to have been overlooked by that champion of local self-government, Mr. P. M. Mehta, in the heat of discussion, but which, in his calmer moments, will, I trust, not be deemed unworthy of his very serious consideration.

Right theories form the key-note of good practical management, and it is in the proportion that practice varies from sound theories, that confusion and disorder are apt to result. In the government of the Municipal affairs of a large and important city like Bombay, it is of vital consequence, that the functions of the executive, should not be hampered and obstructed by the consultative body, which under the Municipal Act, the Corporation is. A constitutional lawyer, like Mr. Mehta, whose utterances have usually been marked with sound sense, and who has such a large following in the Corporation, ought to have been the last person to call into question the wisdom of an appointment, which was quite within the legal powers of the Commissioner, and which was made by him, in full appreciation of his responsibility as the head of the Municipality. There was no pretext of an excuse, for the free criticisms which Mr. Mehta pronounced in derogation of a Municipal servant of fifteen years' standing, and whose only misfortune was, that he was after a lengthened trial, both by the present and the previous Municipal Commissioner, deemed fit to fill a place, for which he was marked out by his high qualifications. No Municipal officer would value his place and preferment to which he may be appointed by a Municipal Commissioner, in recognition of his ability and meritorious service, if he happens to rise from lower grades of service, lest he should be the unhappy victim of unjust and disparaging public criticisms in the Corporation. If one legitimate act of the Commissioner proves obnoxious to any member of the Corporation, what guarantee is there, that all his other acts will not be similarly criticised, which would be far from conducive to harmonious and sound relations between the Commissioner and the Corporation or to good Municipal government. Of course, the Municipal Commissioner is responsible for all the consequences of his acts, and, perhaps, it would be wiser for Mr. Mehta to wait for any ill results following any acts of the executive, than to condemn them simply because they are the constitutional acts of the Commissioner.—Yours, &c.

FATAL TRAM-CAR ACCIDENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Yet another accident occurred last week which cost a Maratha lad his life. In this case also death resulted from the wheels of the car passing over the body. This once more raises the question of providing suitable life-guards round the wheels. The Government of Bombay, not long since, in reply to a submission from me, were pleased to say that the matter was receiving the attention of the Tramway Company. It seems to me that if the coroner of Bombay, who has also been communicated with on the subject, were to seriously press the point, he would render a public service in the interests of humanity. It is now nearly five months since the suggestion was first laid before the public and the company, and it is time the simple precaution against such accidents were adopted.—Yours, &c.,

"MY PARIS NOTE BOOK."

"AN Englishman in Paris" is once more in the field with a volume of anecdotes and incidents of French life and society, to which he has given the title affixed to this article. His former publication, it will be remembered, gave rise to some mystification regarding the writer's identity; and when the secret became only a secret of that sort which the proverb associates with the name of "Polichinelle," there was still ground for wonderment how he could personally recall or vouch for the authenticity of a considerable number of his stories and conversations. Some little light, or something at least that suggests an explanation on this head, is indirectly furnished in these chapters wherein we learn that M. Vandam had a couple of uncles who had both been army surgeons, who came to Paris soon after Quarto Bras and Waterloo, and never left the French capital again for any length of time until the days of their death. They were ardent Bonapartists, and became "Parisians to the backbone and finger-tips," who objected only to sleep their last sleep in or near the city of their adoption, and who consequently both lie in a little cemetery near Amsterdam, where the yellow waters of "the Y" splash against the shore. It is from these uncles and their diaries or note-books that the Englishman in Paris derives on this occasion some of his material; so that if at any time he is found to be relating something which could hardly be supposed to be within his experience, we are to assume that he is indebted so far to his two Dutch uncles. As to his former publication he volunteers the following.

LIGHT ON A LITERARY MYSTIFICATION.

I have no hesitation in saying that M. Tenot exaggerated as much in 1868 as did in 1884 M. de Maupas, whose "Memoirs sur le Second Empire" he had the honour to translate, and to whom I am, moreover, indebted for much of the rough notes that constituted the foundation of "An Englishman in Paris." How they came into his possession, and from his into mine, together with the name of the Englishman who entrusted them to him, I will relate one day, not very distant perhaps. At present it is sufficient to say that the Englishman himself would not recognise them in their actual shape, were he to revisit the glimpses of the moon. The whole of these barely legible, blotted, and quires of notepaper, written very closely, it is true, but only on one side. If, after that, I am not the author of the book, Stephenson is not the inventor of the locomotive, for he did not make his own materials, any more than I did.

It is from an uncle's notes that he gives a conversation with Napoleon III. on the subject of the Empress Maria Louise's attitude towards her husband in his adversity, which will recall a chapter in Lady Rose Weigall's recently published Diaries of her mother, the Countess of Westmoreland:

MARIE LOUISE AND NAPOLEON I.

My uncle having remarked that, after all, a woman could not force her inclinations, the Emperor nodded his head. "I quite agee with you," he said; "and if Marie Louise had simply and openly refused to cohabit with my uncle after the disaster by the late Lord Lyons, it would have been all right; but she would breathe a breath wherever it likes and ridicule the proceedings of so august a body as the city fathers of Bombay. Probably, as mentioned by "Councillor" in his letter, if the notice of the vote had been given, the majority which carried the resolution would have constituted the minority, seeing that Mr. Pearson's abilities as an accountant are quite as equal to those of Mr. Sorabjee N. Cooper, the Chief Accountant, and under such circumstances his selection is the best that could have been made, and this I assert from my own knowledge of Mr. Pearson's services and abilities, when I was myself a member of the Corporation, nominated by Government a few years ago.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The discussion at the Municipal Corporation, reported in your issue of the 19th instant, anent the Commissioner's appointment of Mr. Pearson as acting chief accountant, is suggestive of reflections, which seem to have been overlooked by that champion of local self-government, Mr. P. Right theories form the key-note of good practical management, and it is in the proportion that practice varies from sound theories, that confusion and disorder are apt to result. In the government of the Municipal affairs of a large and important city like Bombay, it is of vital consequence, that the functions of the executive, should not be hampered and obstructed by the consultative body, which under the Municipal Act, the Corporation is. A constitutional lawyer, like Mr. Mehta, whose utterances have usually been marked with sound sense, and who has such a large following in the Corporation, ought to have been the last person to call into question the wisdom of an appointment, which was quite within the legal powers of the Commissioner, and which was made by him, in full appreciation of his responsibility as the head of the Municipality. There was no pretext of an excuse, for the free criticisms which Mr. Mehta pronounced in derogation of a Municipal servant of fifteen years' standing, and whose only misfortune was, that he was after a lengthened trial, both by the present and the previous Municipal Commissioner, deemed fit to fill a place, for which he was marked out by his high qualifications. No Municipal officer would value his place and preferment to which he may be appointed by a Municipal Commissioner, in recognition of his ability and meritorious service, if he happens to rise from lower grades of service, lest he should be the unhappy victim of unjust and disparaging public criticisms in the Corporation. If one legitimate act of the Commissioner proves obnoxious to any member of the Corporation, what guarantee is there, that all his other acts will not be similarly criticised, which would be far from conducive to harmonious and sound relations between the Commissioner and the Corporation or to good Municipal government. Of course, the Municipal Commissioner is responsible for all the consequences of his acts, and, perhaps, it would be wiser for Mr. Mehta to wait for any ill results following any acts of the executive, than to condemn them simply because they are the constitutional acts of the Commissioner.—Yours, &c.

FATAL TRAM-CAR ACCIDENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Yet another accident occurred last week which cost a Maratha lad his life. In this case also death resulted from the wheels of the car passing over the body. This once more raises the question of providing suitable life-guards round the wheels. The Government of Bombay, not long since, in reply to a submission from me, were pleased to say that the matter was receiving the attention of the Tramway Company. It seems to me that if the coroner of Bombay, who has also been communicated with on the subject, were to seriously press the point, he would render a public service in the interests of humanity. It is now nearly five months since the suggestion was first laid before the public and the company, and it is time the simple precaution against such accidents were adopted.—Yours, &c.,

N. M. LUNGRANA,

Cotsgenal Cottage, Bandora, June 22.

the ground that he was incapable of ruling his own wife. Part of the sufferages that made MacMahon President of the Third Republic were given on the no-altogether groundless assumption that in all but military matters Madame la Marechale ruled her husband. It was pretty well the last attempt in France to import "petticoat influence" into politics, and the attempt—I cannot too much insist upon it, in view of what I have said—was not due to the Republicans. The Duchesse de Magenta is a daughter of the house of Castries, whose militant Legitimism and ostentatious religious observance go hand-in-hand. The partisans of the late Comte de Chambord were distinctly under the impression that in the Duchesse they had found another Jeanne d'Arc who this time, would rid their country peaceably of their native enemies, as the peasant girl of Domremy had endeavoured to drive out the alien. It is a moot point with those who profess to know, whether Madame la Duchesse herself did not inspire Legitimists with that idea. Such Republicans as voted for the Marshal, became almost the entire Left abstained from voting, formed a more correct estimate of the soldiers character. There was no doubt in their minds of his innate honesty. They knew that they had not elected a Cromwell, but they also knew that they had not elected a Monk, and that, "come what might, the Duchesses influence over her husband, however great, would fail to make a cats-paw of him for the restoration either of a Bourbon, a d'Orleans a or a Bonaparte. There would be little profit in citing many samples of the malevolent gossip with which the author provides his readers so liberally. His sketches practically terminate with the fall of M. Grevy, under whose rule, if we may trust the chapter headed "Round About the Elysee-Bourbon," the President's official residence was hardly a safe place for honest folk.

SOCIETY AT THE ELYSEE BOURBON.

Is it necessary, after all this, to insist on the truth of the remark I made at the beginning of this chapter, that an invitation to the Elysee-Bourbon does not enhance a man's social standing? I think not. Nor does it enhance a man's opinion himself to know that he is going to an entertainment where detectives are posted at the entrances to the card-poems in order to warn the more innocent guests of the presence of cheats and blackleggs. This is a fact for which I can give my authority if necessary.

At a reception at the Palais Bourbon given by Gambetta in 1880, we are assured that "ten thousand cigars disappeared in half an hour." Worse still was what happened at a

SOIREE AT THE HOTEL-DE-VILLE.

At the inauguration of the Hotel-de-Ville, on the 13th July, 1883, to which ceremony I have already referred "in connection" with the admirable speech of M. Grevy on that occasion, I happened to be in the small drawing-room with her M. Floquet, then Prefect of the Seine, had taken some of his more distinguished guests after dinner, in order to guard them somewhat from the surging crowd merely invited to the reception following the dinner. Lest I should be suspected of wishing to class myself among the distinguished guests, I hasten to add that I was taken there by the late Lord Lyons, in order to be presented to the Burgomaster of Amsterdam. All at once a French 'Arry entered the room, his hat jauntily poised on his head, his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat, the remaing eight fingers drumming a tattoo on his manly chest. M. Floquet turned very pale, but the fellow meant no harm, he had merely come to have a closer look at the "swells." In another moment he strolled out again. A message was sent immediately to the usher, who stood at the top of the staircase, to ramind the new-comers to take off their hats, a reminder not generally necessary in France. The contretemps did not occur again. In a little while perhaps half-an-hour in all after the removal of the cloth, the air had become very close, and the Burgomaster, seeing that smoking was going on everywhere, asked M. Floquet for a cigar. They were all gone. The late M. Alphand told me that the regie had sent twenty-five thousand. The reader of these chapters will not lack entertainment, but as to "An Englishman's" pictures of society under the Third French Republic he will probably wish were it only as a matter of artistic treatment, for a little more light to relieve the heavy shading of the picture.

THE BISMARCK OF THE BALKANS.

MR. STUART CUMBERLAND, writes to the Westminster Gazette:—

I am at dinner at my hotel; the fish has just been served. A voice sounds behind me. I have not heard the step on the carpeted floor.

"Mr. Cumberland?"

"Yes!"

"I am M. Stambuloff's private secretary, and his Excellency desires me to say that he wishes to see you."

"Now, or after dinner?"

A moment's hesitation, during which the private secretary is evidently considering my chances of getting my dinner if I leave the table d'hote at this stage; then, with the remembrance that M. Stambuloff is a man to be obeyed on the instant, he bows and says, "I am sorry to disturb you, but now, if you please."

I get up from the table and follow the private secretary. We meet in the passage by the way a knot of foreign-looking men, members of M. Stambuloffs' numerous suite—on guard, as it were.

The door of M. Stambuloff's private sitting-room is opened, and we enter.

A somewhat stern-looking man of middle age, a man with a massive round head, slightly bald at the temples, dark, intense, deep-set eyes, a thick brown moustache, and a tuft of hair a la Napoleon III. on his chin, is seated at a table.

This is M. Stambuloff, the "Saviour of Bulgaria." He rises and gravely gives me his hand—there is at this moment no cordiality in his grasp—and silently motions me to be seated. We sit watching each other in silence; he closely studying me, I endeavouring to read him. But M. Stambuloff is not an easy man to read. His eyes are impenetrable, his face a hard-set, unreadable quantity. Thus we gaze at each other; then his Excellency breaks the silence by expressing his pleasure making my acquaintance, and I follow by saying how honoured I feel at making his.

We talk about things in general—each in French that is not Parisian, but, for the purpose, fairly understandable. When I founder the secretary comes to my assistance, and puts my words and his Excellency's replies into Bulgarian. It is very Russian in form and sound, this Bulgarian speech, but it apparently has all the brevity of English.

I saw at once that M. Stambuloff would not be drawn about his policy, and I made no attempt at drawing him. He is not a communicative man, but a thinker, a man of deeds not words. An ordinary reader of human nature would at once be struck by his force of character—a force that every feature of his strongly determined face portrays.

To me, this man of iron will; this man, who alone in all Bulgaria was capable of surmounting obstacles from which many a European statesman would have shrunk in hesitation; this man, who possessed no fear and knew not the word failure, was an intensely interesting study.

It is impossible to listen to him without being impressed by his earnestness. I followed him in his survey of the progress of his country with the full conviction that he was not overstating the facts one with,and when he spoke of its future I found myself carried away on the wave of his enthusiasm. His is not the enthusiam of mere emotion, but one born of conviction and fostered on actual belief and practical knowledge.

Given time and freedom, M. Stambuloff—this Bismarck of the Balkans—will realise his dream of Bulgaria. He, like Bismark, has the interests of his country at heart, and, like the, at one time, Iron Chancellor, is—where the welfare of his country is concerned—not over-troubled with scruples. The policy of Bulgaria under Stambuloff is Bismarck's old policy of blood and iron—in miniature.

That Stambuloff aims at the absolute independence of Bulgaria and the formation of the Principality into a kingdom is certain. He only awaits the political—the psychological moment.

As the misconduct of the Rangars in the 17th Bengal Infantry will probably stop all recruiting for Infantry among that class, and as the desire of the military authorities is to obtain sepoys from among the fighting races, observes the Pioneer, we must again draw attention to the possibility of enlisting certain classes of Sikhs who are now rejected because they do not reach the standard of height which most Commandants insist upon. The Sikh of short stature but powerful physique has never found favour with recruiting officers, who look for tall men who will make a grand show on parade. And yet there can be no doubt that one or two battalions of Sikh Rifles, undersized men as compared with the giants of the 14th, 15th, 35th, 36th, and 45th regiments, would be a valuable addition to the Native Army. Such sepoys could be got in abundance, and with the drain on the Sikh population for service abroad, it would seem most desirable that they should be utilised. In hard campaigning the short, compactly-built soldier generally outlasts the man of many inches; he makes, as a rule, a splendid skirmisher; and if he be slow on the march he shows himself capable of extraordinary endurance, and does not go to pieces under hardship. The Gurkha is a case in point; he is a fine type of the under-sized soldier whose characteristics are sturdiness and staying-power, and yet he is a slow marcher except when hill country has to be covered. The lanky Sikh, Punjabi, Hindustani, or Mahratta swings along on the flat, covering long distances in a manner to excite admiration; yet the Gurkha will give them all points when mountain ranges come in the day's march. The Pathan, and perhaps the Hill Dogra, can hold their own with the little men from Nepal. Looking at the natural features of the country beyond the North-West frontier, one must admit that in a great campaign against a European enemy unused to hill warfare, we should have as many thousands of men as possible who could endure the strain of fighting among the mountains. Hill-men, pure and simple, there are in the Gurkhas and trans-frontier Pathans, and to these may be added a leaven of Dogras and Baluchis. But these are comparatively few when the whole Native Army is taken into consideration, and they might well be reinforced by Sikh Rifle Battalions such as we have mentioned. It is a pity to let good material lie neglected, and yet the Sikh of few inches—as regards height only, not as respects that important factor, "chest-measurement"—is left severely alone by recruiting officers. Surely some attempt should be made to enlist him, for he is a man living well within the limits of British territory, and has given hostages to fortune which the tribesmen from beyond the border, now in great demand, can never offer.

FEMININE FACTS AND FANCIES.

THE HAIR.

HAIR is one of the most beautiful adornments given by bountiful nature to men and women, and it is exasperating to observe how fashion rules against it. Instead of making the most of it, not only as an attractive covering, but as an inimitable adornment, we torture and twist it into various inartistic forms, and in the case of men it is closely cut away from the head in fashion to which we have now become accustomed, but which in reality has nothing to recommend it. Compare the lovelocks of the cavaliers with the short hair of the gilded youth of the present day. There is nothing picturesque about the latter, though we have now come to associate it with the idea of smartness and fashion. As to women's hair, the modes of dressing at the present moment are so various that almost any arrangement is admitted as passably conventional. The greater number of the youthful members of fashionable society wear a sort of modified bun at the back, and the lower one descends in the social scale the larger are the proportions of this bun perceived to be. The daughter of a duke wears hers brilliantly glossy, burnished with brushing, and of such artistic dimensions as makes it harmonise with the general outline of the head. The grocer's daughter procures for herself a huge distended stuffing made of horsehair, and sometimes so inadequately covered by real hair as to render it a most unsightly object. As a rule, the shorter the wearer the more enormous is this immense cottage loaf, which is worn well down on the neck. The idea would seem to be to suggest a plenitude of nature's beautiful covering, but to overdo this is to commit an error in art. However, the ordinary coiffure is by no means confined to the varieties of bun and cottage loaf. Sometimes the sausage roll plays its part, occasionally horizontally arranged, and sometimes perpendicularly. The chief fault of these forms is in a proneness to stiffness. For instance, three tight rolls of hair, however pretty the latter may be, running straight up the back of the head, and fixed immutably with hair-pins, have no reference watever to the head itself. Sometimes this is perceived by the possessor, and an air of some abandonment is imparted by fastening a ribbon round the whole and tying it in a bow at the top. Some of the more eccentric forms of hairdressing are those that simulate the teapot with handle, but luckily minus spout. This is to be seen more particularly in evening assemblies, the head itself representing the teapot and a long loop of hair the handle.

THE SEMI-GREEK COIFFURE

Suits some styles of beauty remarkably well, and it is still to be seen among us. Some few real artists have enrolled among the ranks of hairdressers, but unfortunately the general desire on the part of these latter seem to be to induce their customers to adopt the false hair, irrespective of how carefully this may be chosen, or how perfectly arranged, it never has the same effect as the natural growth. It is always discoverable as an artificial addendum, though this truth has scarcely been universally accepted. The ideal coiffure is that which indicates the outline of the head with just so much of additional ornament as serves to display the hair in all its beauty. The ramshackle heads of a few years ago have quite disappeared from fashionable society, and it is a curious study to compare the coiffure of the West-end lady with those of her humble sisters of Whitechapel. The return of the almost forgotten "parting" makes the contrast more decided, the most recent arrangement insisting on this line up the centre of the head, with a billow of hair raised high on either side. A Whitechapel girl, under her hat with a huge feather, wears her hair caught straight back into a bun with certainly a good thick one whole supply brushed down over her forehead in a straight fringe. It is curious to note how many family resemblances, lost during the reign of the fringe, have come out since the introduction of the restoration of the old-fashioned parting. "What a strong likeness you bear to the portrait in the library," says an old friend of the family, 'I never noticed it before.' An example will show what the arrangement of the hair of the youthful descendant is almost identical with that shown in the portrait. The fringe is rapidly departing from among us, and apparently will soon be a thing of the past. It is imagined, however, that the curling tongs have had their day. They are more in request than ever, in order to create the necessary ridges which are such a prominent feature of the coiffure of the moment.

TESTIMONIAL FROM

Sir Samuel Baker,

THE FAMOUS NILE EXPLORER.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

"NEWTON ABBOT, DEVON,
"1st October, 1893.
"I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health, and the sudden visitations of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
"Blair's Pills have rendered no immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.
"If taken exactly according to your directions upon the first inkling of the symptom, without any delay, the enemy is invariably conquered before it has obtained sufficient hold of the system to become formidable.
"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills. "Truly yours,
"(Signed), SAML. W. BAKER."
